

JASCHA HOFFMAN

I am a journalist who covers the intersection of science and culture.

EXPERIENCE

The New York Times, “The Scan” columnist, 2013-present

Cover books, films, exhibits and other cultural events in the Science Times.

Nature, Books and Arts contributor, 2008-present

Interview scientists and artists (such as Margaret Atwood, Werner Herzog and Tom Wolfe) for the culture pages of the British science journal.

The New York Times Magazine, Research Editor, 2008-2011

Fact-checked articles on science and culture on a freelance basis.

The New York Review of Books, Editorial Assistant, 2005-2008

Edited science reviews, matched books to reviewers, hired staff.

Freelance science journalist, 2002-present

Reported on science and culture for the Believer, Boston Globe, New York Times Book Review, Pitchfork, Salon, Scientific American Mind.

EDUCATION

Harvard College, 1997-2002

A.B. Magna Cum Laude in Comp. Study of Religion. Coursework in computer science, philosophy and music. Harvard College Scholar.

SKILLS

Languages: Proficient in French, Portuguese and Wolof.

Computer: Audio and video editing. Simple web design.

Interests: Songwriting and Brazilian music, yoga and Zen.

References and clips available upon request.